

The Cole House

It's all about the food!

The Cole House is an award winning restaurant nestled in a valley of the beautiful Appalachian Mountains in Andrews, North Carolina. Come have brunch, lunch or dinner with us to enjoy good food with a Southern flair in a casual atmosphere!

The cool mountain waters in the valley produce some of the best trout in the country, and at the Cole House we get it fresh and prepare it three delicious ways - Southern style with a cornmeal breading, French style in a butter and wine sauce, and a traditional Trout Almondine.

We also serve up juicy steaks and pasta dishes for dinner, and homemade deli sandwiches and soups for lunch, along with new specials that change every week.

For favorite Cole House recipes and insight into our inspirations for fine dining, peruse "At the Table" on our website, a column written weekly by Executive Chef and Owner Lee Nichols, in "The Andrews Journal" a local newspaper in Andrews, NC.

Where we are in Andrews . . .
The Cole House is on Main Street but it is set back from the road, there are street signs and two columns with lions on top of each column.

If you're traveling east on Main Street from US 19 then The Cole House will be on the left between Oak Street and Tarrent Street. You will pass the police station on the left, and then after you pass Oak Street there will be a two story blue house on the left, and immediately afterward on the left will be The Cole House parking lot.
